NAPPS Advocates for Pet Sitter Certification

Taking the next step in your career opens the door to new clients, increased earning potential

MOUNT LAUREL, N.J. – The National Association of Professional Pet Sitters, the nation’s leading nonprofit professional pet sitting organization, continues to grow its professional certification program. Since its launch in January 2009, more than 300 members have achieved their certification through the program.

The NAPPS Certification Program is a broad-range, in-depth course covering such diverse topics as pet care, animal health, nutrition and behavior, and business development and management. The program also includes a complete pet first aid course. While completing the curricula – which is equivalent to the amount of work completed in a college course over one academic semester – NAPPS Certified Pet Sitters acquire expertise benefitting both their businesses and the pet-owning public.

“The feedback from our certification program has been tremendous,” stated Christi Fries, chair of the Certification Committee and owner of Terrapin Pets, LLC in Beltsville, Maryland. “At the launch of the certification program, we sensed a growing need for pet sitters to further define their skills and expertise. We are thrilled to see members continue experiencing success and business growth through the resources provided from a professional certification.”

NAPPS offers this program, which demonstrates the association’s commitment to fostering the success of its members’ businesses and promoting the value of pet sitting to the public, for both NAPPS members and non-members. In order to become certified, pet sitters must first devote the necessary time to personal study, completing the coursework and passing the certification examination. NAPPS strives to guarantee all pet sitters who earn its certification are qualified by having its Certification Advisory Board review all materials and examinations.

To help potential certificants prepare for the exam, NAPPS provides study materials, including

- pet care and business articles found in the NAPPS virtual library;
- American Red Cross First Aid for Dogs book and CD; and
- American Red Cross First Aid for Cats book and CD.

“Pet sitters who want to take their businesses to the next level should consider enrolling in the NAPPS Certification Program,” said NAPPS President Monica Leighton. “What better way to show your furry clients – and the pet parents who love them so dearly – that you’re a consummate professional who has their best interests at heart?”

NAPPS provides Certified Pet Sitter with numerous benefits such as liability insurance discounts, recognition in the NAPPS Pet Sitter Locator and identification by the NAPPS Certified logo. About NAPPS: NAPPS is a national non-profit trade association dedicated to promoting the welfare of animals. The Association aims to help the pet-owning public, those interested in pet sitting, and professionals engaged in the in-home pet care industry by fulfilling its vision statement, “To be the most respected authority in professional pet sitting.” It does so by providing the tools and support to foster the success of its members. Additionally, pet parents can benefit from NAPPS’ free resources including a disaster preparedness guide, tips on how to select a pet sitter, nationwide referral service, and quarterly teleconferences aimed to educate the pet owning public.
